

Community Impact 2025–26

Who we are

In the 1980s, local people came together to campaign for and secure a derelict site on London's South Bank, determined to put the needs of the Waterloo and North Southwark community first. Their vision led to the creation of homes, community spaces, and opportunities that make Coin Street the vibrant neighbourhood we know today.

At the heart of this work is a family of organisations powering our community:

- Coin Street Centre Trust (CSCT) our charity, championing families, youth and community programmes, and overseeing the Family and Children's Centre and Colombo Centre.
- Coin Street Community Builders (CSCB) a social enterprise providing and managing spaces, people, and resources to deliver lasting social impact across the neighbourhood.
- Colombo Street Community and Sports Centre (also known as the 'Colombo Centre') a hub for health and wellbeing in North Southwark, offering a gym, studios, community room and kitchen, and outdoor sports pitches.
- Jubilee Hall Trust (JHT in partnership with Coin Street) is responsible for managing and operating the gym and sports facilities at the Colombo Centre.

Foreword

It is a pleasure to introduce Coin Street's Community Impact Report for 2025–26. Over the past year, I have had the privilege of seeing first-hand the extraordinary difference Coin Street makes to people's lives. Whether celebrating the achievements of our young people or hosting social gatherings with our senior citizens, I have been reminded that our greatest strength is, and always has been, our community.

This report brings together some of the stories behind the impact. It celebrates the resilience of local people, the dedication of our colleagues and volunteers, and the generosity of our partners and supporters. Together, they show what is possible when people come together with a shared purpose.

The need for our work has never been of such importance as it is now. Many people across Waterloo and North Southwark continue to face significant challenges including the rising cost of living, poor mental health, loneliness and inequality.

Over the past year, I have been proud to see Coin Street stand alongside our community during times of uncertainty, working with partners to help keep people safe and reaffirming our commitment to diversity, inclusion and respect for everyone who calls our neighbourhood home. Trusted community organisations like Coin Street have an important role to play in helping people feel connected, supported and able to thrive.

As Chair of Coin Street Centre Trust, I am incredibly proud of what has been achieved and grateful to everyone who has contributed to our work. I hope this report leaves you inspired by what we have achieved together and encourages you to be part of the next chapter of Coin Street's story.

Lenny Goodrich
Chair, Coin Street Centre Trust

The impact it has

Coin Street's activities help bring people together, reducing loneliness and strengthening connections between neighbours. By taking part in community programmes, residents of all ages build friendships, feel a greater sense of belonging and benefit from improved physical and mental wellbeing. These opportunities create a stronger, more supportive community where people can stay active, engaged and connected.

At the same time, Coin Street helps people build the skills and confidence they need to thrive. Adults gain new knowledge and experience that can improve their chances of finding paid work, while parents feel more confident and better able to manage the challenges of family life. For children, access to high-quality support and activities helps them develop socially, emotionally and academically, giving them a strong foundation and preparing them well for school.

Project spotlights

A whole family approach: Coin Street's family and children's service

When Naima and her young son Mohammed arrived in the neighbourhood, they felt alone and overwhelmed. Her child had complex needs, and Naima spoke very little English.

At Coin Street, things began to change. With kindness, patience, and staff who spoke her language, trust slowly grew.

"At first, I was scared but I saw how kind they were and I knew he was safe."

Naima

At first, Mohammed found it hard to join in. Step by step, with specialist support, he grew in confidence – playing with other children, speaking his first words, and becoming stronger and more independent every day.

At the same time, Naima was supported too. She joined groups, such as sensory play, wellbeing sessions and ESOL classes, which improved her English, and helped her to build connections. With gentle one-to-one support, Naima opened up about her experience of fleeing domestic abuse and feeling isolated.

Our Family Support team helped Naima understand her child's needs, navigate services, and find her voice. She began to speak up, ask questions, and shape decisions about Mohammed's future. Her older son, who had quietly taken on a caring role, was also supported – helping him feel seen, heard, and cared for.

Practical help made a difference too. With support, the family secured disability living allowance and began the journey towards better housing. During holidays, they were able to spend happy, relaxed time together.

"I realised I am not alone. My child can be happy, and so can I."

Naima

By the time Mohammed moved on to specialist education, he was thriving.

This is the power of our whole-family approach – changing not just one life, but the possibilities for an entire family.

Growing Together: Gentle Gardening

Every Tuesday morning, whatever the weather, people gather in Bernie Spain Gardens for far more than gardening.

For many, our Gentle Gardening group is a place to connect with nature and build friendships. Together, the gardeners grow fruit, vegetables and herbs, care for one of Waterloo's most loved green spaces and end each session by sharing a healthy meal, often made with ingredients harvested from the garden.

With support from the National Lottery Community Fund, we have transformed the growing space with new raised beds, healthier soil and improved accessibility. These improvements create a more productive garden and enable more local people to take part, whatever their experience or ability.

Twenty-five people attend regularly, with many more joining throughout the year. The group welcomes people from a range of backgrounds, including those who are unemployed, neurodivergent, managing mental health challenges or living with disabilities. Gentle Gardening provides purpose, structure and a reason to get out of the house each week.

For local resident Jasmine, the group has become an important part of her life. "I've been coming for seven years and look forward to it every week," she says. Known affectionately as the group's unofficial 'slug and snail patrol', Jasmine is just as passionate about protecting the vegetables as she is about welcoming new participants. "It gets you outside among the wildlife and helps you meet new people," she says.

The impact extends beyond Bernie Spain Gardens. Throughout the year, participants have explored other inspiring green spaces across London including Kew Gardens, the Orchid Festival, Stave Hill Ecological Park and the Garden Museum at Lambeth Palace. These visits encourage learning, spark new ideas and strengthen the friendships that have grown through the project.

Gentle Gardening demonstrates how community-led projects can transform both places and people. By caring for a shared space, participants improve their wellbeing, develop confidence and create lasting friendships while helping to make Bernie Spain Gardens an even more vibrant and welcoming place for everyone.

Faces and Fabrics:

A collaborative community quilt

At Coin Street, we believe strong communities are built through connection, creativity and care. Faces and Fabrics brought those values to life by bringing together people aged 7 to 80 to create a collaborative community quilt.

Faces and Fabrics was created in collaboration with Coin Street's Over 50s Art Group, ESEA Unseen and the wider community. Led by Nishi Begum and Libbie Jackson-Bell from the Coin Street's Youth and Community team, and Sue Man and Kim Chin from ESEA Unseen. This is a joyful and collaborative project – one that literally stitches together people, place, and community. This project was made possible thanks to funding from Arts Council England.

Today, the quilt is much more than a piece of textile art. It is a lasting symbol of the people, stories and relationships that make our neighbourhood such a special place. Every stitch represents someone's journey, and together they tell the story of a community where everyone has a place and every contribution matters.

The project engaged 65 local people in creative workshops, with more than 80 residents, volunteers, staff and neighbours contributing to the finished quilt. Each self-portrait panel tells a personal story, creating a vibrant artwork that reflects the diversity of our community.

Many participants arrived feeling unsure of their creative abilities – some had never sewn before. Through the team's encouragement and a welcoming environment, people discovered new skills, expressed themselves creatively and found the confidence to contribute.

Children and young people worked alongside older residents, sharing stories, learning from one another and building friendships. These conversations helped to bridge the generational divide and create a close sense of community.

The workshops also became a space for reflection, healing and remembrance. One participant returned to complete a portrait of her beloved dog after he passed away, while another found comfort during a particularly difficult period in her life. The quilt also includes the final artwork created by one resident before they died, ensuring their contribution remains part of Coin Street's story for years to come.

Reflecting on the experience, participant Keith said:

"I felt truly privileged to take part in the Faces and Fabrics community quilt project. At first, I was surprisingly anxious about creating my own panel. Thankfully, Nishi noticed my hesitation and kindly sat down with me for a chat. The opportunity to talk with people of all ages while working on our panels was invaluable. Seeing my panel included in the quilt and featured in the exhibition was a profound honour."

The completed quilt was unveiled at our neighbourhood centre alongside other community textile artwork, giving contributors the opportunity to celebrate their achievements with family, friends and neighbours.

One visitor reflected:

"It was truly a privilege to witness such a powerful community event. The atmosphere was filled with connection, creativity, curiosity and care."

Get fit for life:

Building confidence through sport

Every week, young people from across Waterloo and North Southwark come to the Colombo Centre to do more than play football or work out in the gym. They come to build confidence, make friends and spend time with trusted adults who believe in their potential.

Made possible through Southwark Council's Positive Future for Young People fund, our Get Fit for Life programme provides a safe, welcoming space where young people can be active, develop new skills and spend time with other young people.

Over the past year, 95 young people have taken part in weekly gym and football sessions. What began as a sports programme has become a place where young people from different schools, backgrounds and circumstances come together, form lasting friendships and develop a strong sense of belonging.

The impact reaches far beyond sport:

- 94% of participants say they feel part of their community
- 78% report increased confidence

Through trusted relationships and positive role models, young people are overcoming barriers linked to anxiety, injury, social isolation and financial disadvantage.

One young person in care had never attended a live football match before. With encouragement from the team, he found the confidence to go.

Danny, Youth & Community Programmes Coordinator, explains:

"It took several conversations over a month to build his confidence to come along. Just attending was a huge achievement. Opportunities like this make a real difference for young people who otherwise wouldn't have the chance. Seeing the players they'd only watched on television was something really special."

Seb, Community Programmes Lead Worker

Parents have noticed the difference too. Seb, Community Programmes Lead Worker, recalls: "A mum came over after one session to thank us. Her son had always been shy, but she had seen a real change in his confidence and willingness to make friends. She said the welcoming atmosphere had made all the difference."

By creating inclusive activities where participation matters more than performance, we are helping young people develop confidence, resilience and stronger social networks. Families benefit from knowing their children have somewhere safe to go, trusted adults to turn to and opportunities to realise their potential.

Get Fit for Life is helping young people feel safe, included and confident. Through activities, friendships and new opportunities, the programme supports them to build brighter and healthier futures.

Impact across our neighbourhood

Southwark College student volunteers

Connecting Waterloo Community: Building stronger communities through volunteering

Volunteers play a vital role in making Coin Street the welcoming and vibrant community it is today. Through the Connecting Waterloo Community partnership, local people are building new skills, making lasting friendships and helping create a more connected Waterloo.

Launched in June 2025, the partnership brings together Coin Street, The Bridge at Waterloo, Bright Centres and Oasis Hub Waterloo to provide a more joined-up and inclusive approach to volunteering. Together, we're making it easier for people of all ages and backgrounds to find meaningful opportunities to contribute to their community.

More than 200 volunteers support activities across the partnership, from youth sessions and language clubs to community events and gardening projects. Flexible volunteering opportunities, coordinated by a dedicated Volunteer Programme Lead, enable people aged 16 and over to share their time and talents in ways that suit their interests and availability.

The partnership is committed to making volunteering accessible to everyone. Working with organisations such as The Autism Project, alongside providing specialist training and tailored support, we continue to remove barriers so more people can benefit from the experience of volunteering.

The impact is clear. Volunteers report gaining increased confidence, new skills and stronger connections with their community. Volunteers are also gaining practical qualifications, including first aid and food hygiene, with some now leading activities such as craft sessions and a fortnightly crochet group.

The two-year project runs until June 2027 thanks to funding from South Bank & Waterloo Neighbours (SoWN), in partnership with Lambeth Council.

Turner & Townsend and CBRE took on the Big Half

In September, 19 runners from local corporate partners, including Turner & Townsend and CBRE, took on the Big Half, raising £5,475 to support Coin Street's work tackling loneliness and social isolation among older adults in Waterloo and North Southwark. Funds raised through the event help sustain programmes and activities which provide safe, warm and welcoming spaces for more than 240 older adults each year.

Reflecting on the partnership, Nicky Hatt, Associate Director at CBRE, said:

"CBRE and Turner & Townsend PJM UK are delighted to support Coin Street and our local community by taking part in the Big Half. Our people are passionate about investing in our communities and bridging generational gaps.

Through supporting initiatives like this, we demonstrate our commitment to the wellbeing of local residents, helping to build a stronger, more inclusive society where everyone can thrive."

The Big Half continues to be an important source of community support for Coin Street. Since the charity first took part in the event, 27 runners have raised £10,240 to help deliver youth and community programmes that strengthen connections, improve wellbeing and create opportunities for local people of all ages.

We are grateful to every runner, fundraiser and corporate partner who has supported this effort, helping us build a more connected and resilient neighbourhood.
